Laura has just changed her job. Until last month she was working for a large American company in the centre of Frankfurt. The work was interesting, but she worked long hours. She often used to be at the office from eight in the morning to six in the evening or even later. Another problem was that she had to travel for more than an hour to work every day when the trains and buses were full and it was the same when she left the office. A third problem was that she didn't earn enough. A short while ago she found an ad in the newspaper. A computer company near where she lives wanted an office assistant. They offered a high salary. Laura went to an interview and they offered her the job. First she will have to take a computer course, but when she finishes the course next month, she can start work for the new company. She is happy about the new job, of course. She'll certainly earn more than she has done, she doesn't have to work more than thirty-eight hours a week and she will get five weeks' holiday a year, one week more than at her last job.

- 86 Laura didn't enjoy the work at her last job.
- 87 She travelled in buses and trains for more than two hours every day.
- 88 There were a lot of people in the trains when Laura went home.
- 89 Laura has started her new job.
- 90 At her new job Laura will have both better pay and more holidays than she had before.
